Introduction

The 2012 EGTC Monitoring Report is the result of a yearly exercise commissioned by the Committee of the Regions (CoR) and carried out in connection with the Platform of the European Groupings of Territorial Cooperation (EGTC). In line with Regulation (EC) 1082/2006, the Monitoring Report aims to draw a complete picture of both the established EGTCs and the groupings that existed in the 2012 reporting period.

The methodology consisted of both desk research and interviews. Desk research was used as a first step in approaching the EGTCs. Given that in 2012 almost all the EGTCs had a website and the CoR online platform contained a lot of information about past and present developments, online research was enough to get an initial overview of the activities of the EGTCs in 2012. However, only the interviews really provided new information and an in-depth insight into both the structure and activities of the groupings. In fact, the majority of the qualitative information presented in this report was gained from direct contact with EGTC staff.

The main points covered in the EGTC Monitoring Report for 2012 can be summarised as follows:

- This report updates the EGTC Monitoring Report for 2011. All groupings examined in the previous Monitoring Report have been contacted to update the data in light of any relevant developments that may have occurred in the meantime.
- In addition, six new cases studies have been drawn up for this report. This raises the total number of established EGTCs to 32. This number more or less corresponds to the number of EGTCs set up in 2011. Hungary is still leading in terms of establishment of new EGTCs. In fact, five of the six newly created EGTC have Hungarian members.
- The main reason for setting up an EGTC has not changed since the 2011 Monitoring Report: The most important reason is working with geographical neighbours to build an institutional framework for cooperation on projects of common interest that transcend legally defined national borders. There is an exception, however. One of the newly constituted EGTCs has stated that the motivation for creating an EGTC was the ambition to establish a platform for exchanging practices in urban development.
- In order to collect comparable and measurable data on groupings, the EGTC Monitoring Report now includes the following indicators for each EGTC: the members per country and administration involved; the total annual budget; the number of staff hired directly or subject to other contractual or statutory relations; and the number of EU-funded projects and programmes implemented in 2012.

- New tables have been included clearly spelling out the field of activity of each EGTC. The fields of activity are grouped according to the areas covered by each of the Committee of the Regions' commissions, making it easier for them to participate in the consultative work of the Committee. Activities linked to the Europe 2020 strategy are also highlighted and grouped.
- In addition to the 32 EGTCs already constituted, 17 new groupings are currently in the pipeline. For the latter, the same approach to classification was used as in the 2011 EGTC Monitoring Report. Therefore, EGTCs now in the process of being constituted are divided into three separate groups: EGTCs awaiting official approval; EGTCs in preparation; EGTCs that are still just ideas.

Executive Summary

The Committee of the Regions regularly publishes a monitoring report on the development of the European Grouping of Territorial Cooperation (EGTC) as the European legal entity for cross-border, transnational and interregional cooperation of public bodies. The present report analyses the latest developments from 2012 and builds on the findings from the earlier EGTC Monitoring Reports of 2010 and 2011, as well as previous studies. The objective of the EGTC Monitoring Report is to give an overview of the current state of play of all EGTCs in the European Union.

By the end of 2012, there were 32 EGTC in total, comprising about 700 national, local and regional authorities from 17 Member States. A further 17 groupings are currently in the pipeline.

Review of the National Provisions

Looking at the adoption of the national provisions across the EU Member States, the situation has not changed since 2011. In late 2012, national provisions had been adopted in almost all Member States with the exception of Austria, Germany and Belgium, where the process takes longer because of their federal administrative structures. In these three countries, strong federalist structures have led to a situation where national provisions have been adopted by the regional bodies but federal law is still pending. As such, all Austrian and German Länder have adopted a legal framework for the EGTC while the federal authorities are only expected to approve these provisions between 2013 and 2014. In the case of Belgium, one of the reasons why the adoption is still pending is the recent three-year long government crisis.

There has been increasing discussion of rapidly adopting revised regulation (EC) 1082/2006. The CoR recommended that the new EGTC regulation be fast-tracked in an opinion adopted in February (drafted by Michel Delebarre) and in an inter-institutional conference held in March. All the proposals contained in the CoR opinion were accepted by the REGI Committee of the European Parliament in July – the first time that a CoR opinion has had such an impact. Joachim Zeller, MEP and rapporteur for revising the EGTC regulation, also sees rapid adoption as a key priority. A revised regulation should result in simplification and open up new opportunities in territorial cooperation and beyond. Zeller also argues that one of the reasons for the limited number of existing EGTCs and the slow pace of creating new EGTCs is the delay in adopting the current EU regulation and in adapting it to national rules in the EU Member States. A revised regulation could offer a possible solution whereby the appointment of even a single notification authority per Member State would speed up and ease the notification process. Moreover, the proponents of rapid adoption of the revised regulation argue that there is no need to wait for the adoption of the 2014-2020 regulations, given that the EGTC regulation is not a financial one.

New EGTCs constituted in 2012 or late 2011¹

Six new EGTCs were created between the end of 2011 and the end of 2012, whereas seven EGTCs were established over the course of 2011. This suggests that the EGTCs are increasing at a steady rate. Interestingly, four of the new EGTCs are based in Hungary, which means that all of these groupings have at least one Hungarian member and include Central and Eastern European territories. The new EGTC EUKN is noteworthy: it is exclusively made up of national authorities and was created as a network for urban policy makers, practitioners and researchers. This may mark a shift from the more traditional EGTCs constituted as a platform for joint projects in cross-border territories, to one where EGTCs function as a platform for exchanging practices, and it may serve as an example of EGTCs as a tool for formalising certain areas of intergovernmental cooperation.

The table below summarises the key data on the most recently established groupings, including their constituent countries, a description of their specific features and their date of constitution.

Evolution of EGTCs: the groupings in a nutshell

The EGTC Regulation entered into force in 2006. Two years later, the first four EGTCs were founded. In terms of geographical distribution, the 32 groupings established today can be divided into three groups of Member States:

- Spain, France, Portugal: total of 7 groupings
- Hungary, Slovakia, Romania: 12 groupings altogether; there has recently been very dynamic development Hungary's borders – a process supported by financial incentives from Hungary
- France, Belgium, Germany: 5 groupings

The main precondition for establishing a grouping is the availability of funds. There are important differences across Europe in terms of financial endowment of EGTCs. It varies according to the number of inhabitants of the area covered and the economic standing of the regions or municipalities involved. The Eurométropole Lille-Kortrijk-Tournai has a comparatively large annual budget of around EUR 1.5 million, and therefore stands in stark contrast with around a third of the EGTCs whose annual budgets range from EUR 25 000 to EUR

²No qualitative phone interview has yet been done for this grouping. Efforts to make contact before this executive summary was published have been unsuccessful.

75 000. In general, the groupings largely count on funding from projects carried out in connection with ETC programmes.

On the path from initial commitment to the establishment of an EGTC's operative structure, one of the major milestones is hiring staff. So far 17 EGTCs, i.e. slightly more than half the groupings, have hired staff. There are now around 75 people employed by EGTCs across the EU. In other words, an EGTC employs four people on average, but the number varies significantly across groupings.

Generally speaking, EGTC are set up to carry out a wide range of activities. Most EGTCs are involved in wide-ranging policy development and strategy building. This type of EGTC explores and develops new forms of governance and cohesion. A significant number of EGTCs do not predetermine the subject area on which they work, but clearly state that their primary objective is development and implementation of collaborative projects.

The socio-economic situation in the region covered by an EGTC predetermines to some extent its main goals and overarching strategy for project development. Two thirds of the groupings – in particular those from the Spanish-French-Portuguese group and the Hungarian-Slovak-Romanian group – take a broad approach to cohesion policy and regional development. The project ideas and the projects implemented focus on infrastructure, entrepreneurship and tourism development paired with the protection of the environment and natural heritage. For EGTCs whose partnerships consist mainly of rural municipalities, local stakeholders generally point to emigration and unemployment as growing problems. This is also mirrored in the EGTCs' activities in education and training of young people.

The group of EGTCs located in the political core of the EU – i.e. France, Belgium, Germany and Luxembourg – focuses on spatial planning and urban development as well as initiatives in the fields of culture, sports and education.

Two EGTCs have been founded for one clear-cut purpose: the EGTC Grande Region acts as a Managing Authority for a multi-lateral cross-border cooperation programme linked to ETC; the EGTC Hospital Cerdanya manages a cross-border hospital.

The following chart offers an aggregate picture of the policy areas presently covered by the groupings. It is important to note that this is merely a snapshot based on:

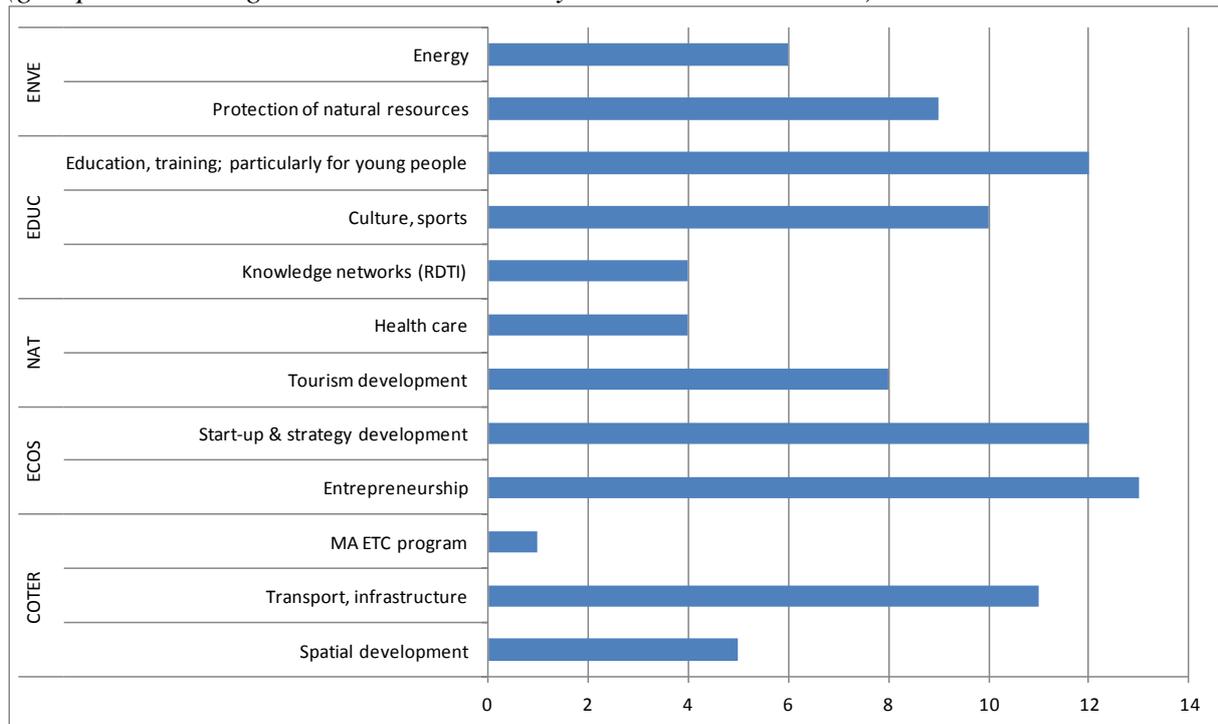

- the main strategic priorities according to the documents and

- information on projects that either have already been implemented or are currently being implemented

Most EGTCs are seen as instruments of cooperation for developing and implementing projects. Consequently, the focus of activities may change.

(grouped according to the areas covered by each CoR commission)

The groupings' relevance in terms of the Europe 2020 Strategy can be seen in the overarching strategy for the forthcoming period of cohesion policy. A major aspect highlighted in one of the seven underlying flagship initiatives, Youth on the Move, is also reflected in the current activities of the EGTC: a significant number of EGTCs are involved in youth education.

EGTCs currently being set up

There are 17 groupings in the pipeline: five awaiting final approval, six in the preparation phase and five which are still just 'ideas' for potential groupings. The EGTCs that have not yet been established can be classified in the same way as in the 2011 Monitoring Report, as shown in the table below:

1 Comparative analysis of national provisions

Looking at the adoption of the national provisions across the EU Member States, the situation has not changed since 2011. In late 2012, national provisions had been adopted in almost all Member States with the exception of Austria, Germany and Belgium, where the process takes because of their federal administrative structures. In these three countries, strong federalist structures have led to a situation where national provisions have been adopted by the regional bodies but federal law is still pending. As such, all Austrian and German Länder have adopted a legal framework for the EGTC while the federal authorities are only expected to approve these provisions between 2013 and 2014. In the case of Belgium, one of the reasons why the adoption is still pending is the recent three-year long government crisis.

There has been increasing discussion of rapidly adopting revised regulation (EC) 1082/2006. The CoR recommended that the new EGTC regulation be fast-tracked in an opinion adopted in February (drafted by Michel Delebarre) and in an inter-institutional conference held in March. All the proposals contained in the CoR opinion were accepted by the REGI Committee of the European Parliament in July – the first time that a CoR opinion has had such an impact. Joachim Zeller, MEP and rapporteur for revising the EGTC regulation, also sees rapid adoption as a key priority. A revised regulation should result in simplification and open up new opportunities in territorial cooperation and beyond. 2 Review of the activity of the EGTC

The following chapter consists of an in-depth description of the state of play and development of EGTCs in the reporting period. It starts with the new groupings set up in 2012 and late 2011 (6) which were not included in the preceding Monitoring Report 2011.

The second part of this core chapter of the report examines the updated case studies of EGTCs set up in 2011 (8). The third part highlights updated case studies from earlier EGTC Monitoring reports (18).

Each part of this section is accompanied by a map showing the geographical distribution of the relevant groupings in the period in question.

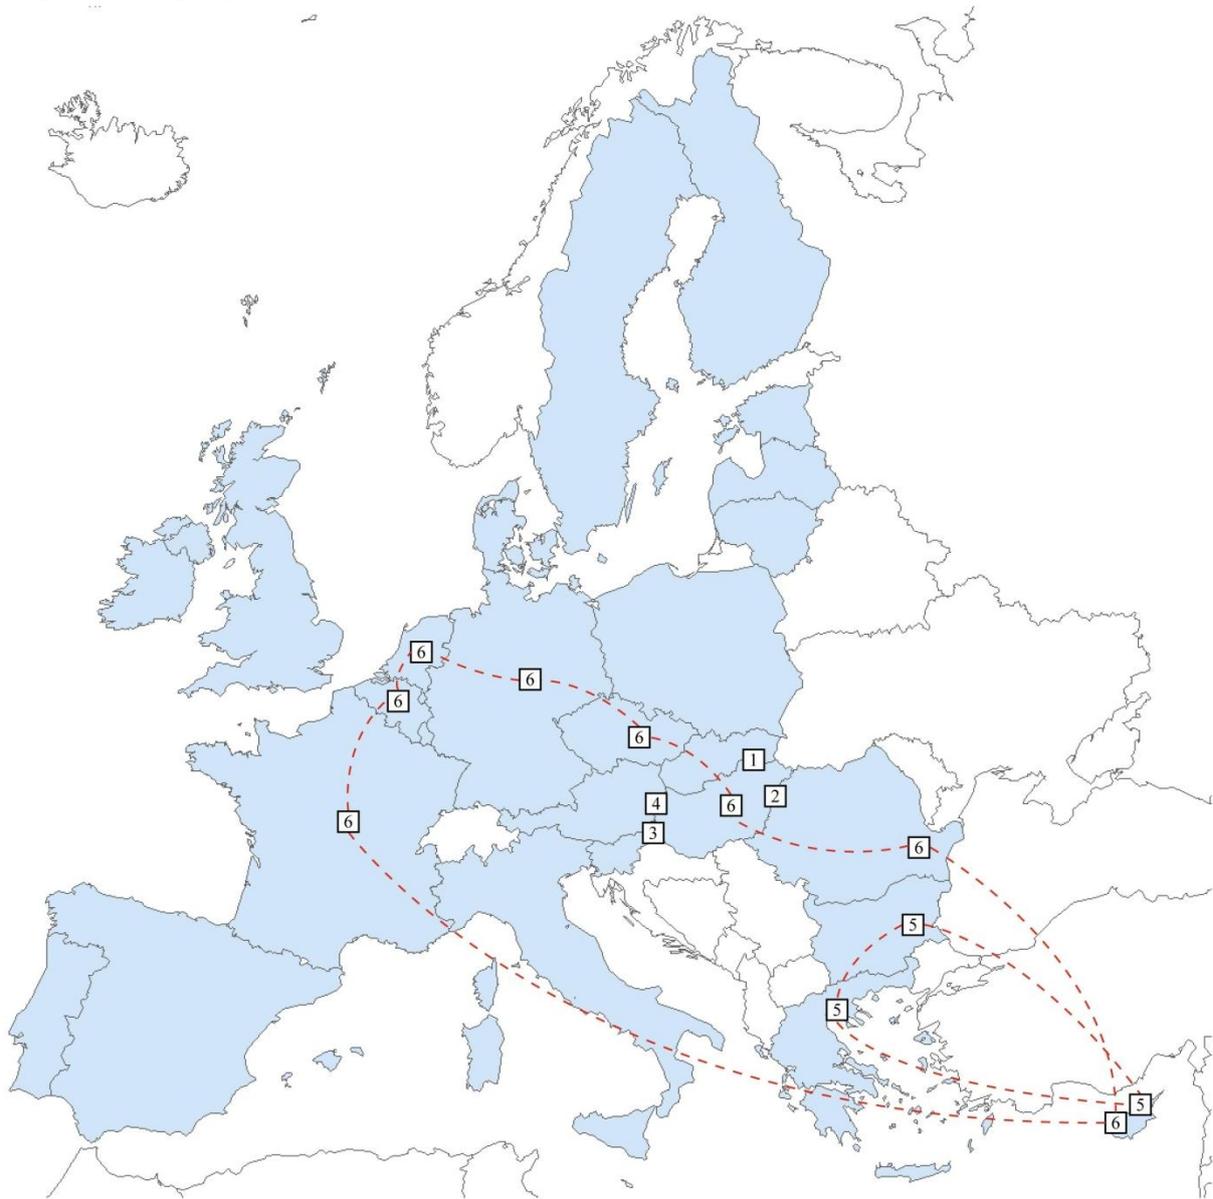

2.1 EGTC constituted in 2012 or late 2011

Six new EGTCs were created between the end of 2011 and the end of 2012, whereas seven EGTCs had been established over the course of 2011. This suggests that the EGTCs are increasing at a steady rate. Interestingly, four of the new EGTCs are based in Hungary, which means that all of these groupings have at least one Hungarian member and include Central and Eastern European territories. The new EGTC EUKN is noteworthy: it is exclusively made up of national authorities and was created as a network for urban policy makers, practitioners and researchers. This may mark a shift from the more traditional EGTCs constituted as a platform for joint projects in cross-border territories, to one where EGTCs function as a platform for exchanging practices, and it may serve as an example of EGTCs as a tool for formalising certain areas of intergovernmental cooperation.

2.2 EGTCs constituted in 2011

Eight EGTCs were established in 2011. Out of these new groupings, three are French-Spanish partnerships; two bring together Hungarian and Slovak members, and two include at least one Italian member.

At the time of writing the previous EGTC Monitoring Report for 2011, these groupings were still at an early stage of development. A number of changes and developments can therefore be reported in the present Monitoring Report. Major developments have been identified in two distinct areas: 1) new projects that were implemented and 2) new areas for improvement in the EGTCs.

All the EGTCs that were established in 2011 have taken steps to implement territorial cooperation projects in the reporting year 2012. Five of these EGTCs have managed to implement projects with a total budget of about EUR 4 million.

The EGTCs report that further improvement is needed in the following two areas:

- Staff: almost all EGTCs mentioned that they are willing to hire new staff who are qualified in fund raising and able to turn funding into concrete ideas and projects. Some EGTCs also mentioned that they would like to internationalise their staff and increase their PR.

- Network: The EGTCs mentioned that they are willing to expand their cooperation network, especially to increase exchange of best practices.

The table below (Table 5) gives an overview of the EGTCs that were constituted in 2011. Map 3 shows the geographical distribution of EGTCs established in 2011. The next section of this chapter analyses these EGTCs in detail based on key information such as their Offices, projects and members.

2.3 EGTCs set up before 2011

The large majority of the EGTCs that were established before 2011 have continued to develop and implement new projects, demonstrating that this structure works as a means of cooperation between all relevant stakeholders in a given territory.

However, some EGTCs have faced considerable challenges as a result of the economic and financial crisis (e.g. EGTC Galicia-Norte de Portugal, Ister Granum, ZASNET). These groupings were forced to delay or cancel a number of projects. Another result was that individual members decided to leave the EGTC (e.g. EGTC Ister Granum).

Table 6 gives an overview of the EGTCs set up before 2011. Map 4 shows their geographical distribution. The next section of this chapter analyses the situation of EGTCs that were established before 2011 and provides detailed information on key indicators such as offices, projects and members.

3 Evolution of the EGTCs: The groupings in a nutshell

The EGTC Regulation entered into force in 2006. Two years later, in 2008, the first four EGTCs had been established. So far, the years 2010 and 2011 have marked the peaks in the development of EGTCs given that nine groupings were founded in each of these two years. Within a period of five years, from 2008 to 2012, about 32 groupings had been established in total.

In terms of geography, the following trends towards concentration in distinct groups of Member States can be observed:

- Spain, France, Portugal, with a total of seven groupings: the longstanding history of cooperation in this part of Europe is one of the remarkable assets that contributed to the success in establishing these groupings. Most of the EGTCs take a broad approach to territorial cohesion.
- Hungary, Slovakia, and Romania: 12 groupings have been established in this part of the EU. The recent past has shown very dynamic developments along the borders of Hungary – a process which has been supported by financial incentives from Hungary. Most of these groupings focus on a broad range of regional policy issues, in particular the promotion of entrepreneurship (e.g. through tourism development)
- France, Belgium, Germany, Luxembourg with five groupings: in the ‘heartland’ of the EU, the development of the EGTC is strongly driven by integrated visions for cross-border conurbations and their capacity to carry out visible actions that help raise awareness.

The overarching common feature of these groupings is that their evolution took place in a contiguous territory and was driven by a vision of cross-border cooperation.

In addition to the abovementioned groups, there is a group of EGTC which has to be labelled as the group of transnational initiatives. Their evolution shows marked differences: while two EGTCs in this group link maritime territories, one is the result of longstanding transnational cooperation resulting in the establishment of a think-tank for urban policies.

The partnerships

The overarching objective of EGTCs is to establish partnerships to support development. There are significant differences across the 32 existing EGTCs. In fact, the 32 groupings which have provided data now represent about 700 institutions in total. The partnerships range from small-scale, local cooperation to regional-local cooperation and multi-level partnerships including actors from all administrative levels. The table below gives an overview of the types of partnerships that make up an EGTC.

Table 7. Typology of partnerships

Type of Partnership	Number of such partnerships	Comment
Local	15
Local Small 2 to 20 municipalities	10	including EGTCs whose members are also Urban Communities
Local Medium 21 to 100 municipalities	3
Local Large 101 to 200 municipalities	2	One in the Spanish-Portuguese, and one in the Hungarian-Slovak border areas
Regional	11
Regional 2 to 6 partners	7
Predominantly regional 2 to 6 partners	4	i.e. although institutions at national level are included regional interests prevail
Multi-level	2
National, regional, local for specific purpose	2
Transnational	4
Local and regional	3
National	1	EUKN
Total	32

Source: metis, EGTC database

The largest number of partnerships (about one third) are small local partnerships; roughly the same number of EGTCs can be classified as regional partnerships. These basic characteristics have strong implications for the actual scope of activities (see below).

The economic standing of EGTC

The precondition for an operative structure is the availability of funding. The financial endowments of EGTC reveal huge differences across Europe depending on the numbers of inhabitants of the areas covered as well as the economic standing of the regions involved. Eurométropole Lille-Kortrijk-Tournai, with a comparatively large annual budget of about EUR 1.5 million, stands next to a large group of EGTCs (about one third of all groupings) that have annual budgets ranging between EUR 25 000 and 75 000.

A comparison between 2010 and 2012 shows that this group of EGTCs in particular has seen a substantial increase in the past three years. A substantial share of the EGTCs with a small budget are part of the EU-12.

Table 8. Size of EGTC budgets⁶

Aspect	End 2010	End 2012
EGTC total	17	32

500 to 75 000	2	10
75 001 to 300 000	3	6
300 001 to 1 500 000	5	10

Source: Metis – EGTC database

The size of an EGTC’s budget seems to have a clear impact on its capacity. However, it is important to note that in 2012, five out of the 10 EGTCs with comparatively small budgets reported an increase in staff.

For nearly all groupings the prospect of ETC-projects as a major funding source is the essential target on the path to consolidation. 14 out of 32 groupings reported that projects funded from ETC-programmes have either been implemented or are currently being implemented. Such projects significantly expand operational capacity or, in the case of small overall budgets, they are a prerequisite for action.

⁶ It is important to note that the EGTC Hospital of Cerdanya was not considered since no recent data have been made available: its intended function as employer of staff – and thus requiring a corresponding budget - would change the overall picture.

The content of projects vary to a great extent from the preservation of natural heritage to transport, childcare, sports and leisure facilities, tourism development, health care, development of urban green zones or support for entrepreneurship.

A particular success in the acquisition of ETC-projects can be reported for EGTCs such as ZASNET and Duero-Douro in the Spanish-Portuguese border areas, Euroregion Pyrenees-Mediterranean (Spanish-French) or Ister Granum and Pons Danubii in the Hungarian-Slovak border area: the development of budgets in these cases clearly reflects the successful acquisition of ETC projects.

However, it is important to note that these EGTCs were set up quite early, i.e. in the period between 2008 and 2010. It must be added that across the EU in 2012, most ETC programmes have reached high to full commitment levels. This poses a particular challenge for the 12 EGTCs founded in 2011 and 2012 but also a number of EGTCs founded previously – in particular in the Hungarian-Slovak-Romanian areas.

Staff

On the path from the initial commitment for establishing an EGTC to the actual set up of an operative structure, one of the major milestones and challenges is hiring staff. Hiring staff that are solely dedicated to the work of the EGTC is one of the major pre-requisites for a steadier path towards consolidation. Taking on the role of an employer, however, comes with a major commitment and responsibility, which in some cases goes beyond mere economic considerations: despite numerous examples across Europe, hiring staff is still considered to be one of the major challenges. There are EGTCs which – given their budget size – could hire staff but prefer other contractual arrangements to ensure operative capacity.

Currently, 19 EGTCs have reported hiring staff, i.e. more than half of all the groupings. In total, there are now about 85 persons working in EGTCs across the EU. In the overwhelming majority of cases the EGTC acts as the employer; only three EGTCs reported having employer that is not the EGTC itself.

On average, the total number of staff amounts to four employees, but the numbers vary significantly. The Eurométropole counts 12 members of staff. Other EGTCs reach similar numbers when counting project-based staff. In contrast, eight groupings count between 1 and 3 employees.

Seven EGTCs have explicitly stated that staff have been hired on a project basis. According to reports, one can estimate that about one quarter to one third of the persons currently working in EGTCs are carrying out project assignments. For EGTCs with small budgets based on membership fees, the number of staff will continue to depend on their success in acquiring projects.

Fields of activity

Generally, EGTCs aim to perform a broad variety of activities. The groupings work in the framework of ETC and one of the characteristic features of ETC programmes is that programme partners seek to allow for – and applying partnerships show an interest in – a broad range of measures.

To some extent EGTC mirror this overarching tendency: most of the EGTCs can be considered as carrying out broad initiatives in policy development, strategy building and implementation. This type of EGTC takes an exploring and consolidating approach to new ways of governance and cohesion. A significant number of EGTCs do not predefine the themes but clearly state that the development and implementation of cooperation projects is their main purpose.

At this stage it might be interesting to discuss what determines the actual fields of activity of an EGTC:

- The partnership to some extent predefines the key interests and scope of action: first from an administrative and policy-making perspective, e.g. tourism development can be very effective in a grouping made up of municipalities, whereas other activities require a multi-level approach (such as establishing cross-border health-care facilities) or, in most Member States, require cooperation at national level (e.g. when acting as managing authority (MA) for an ETC programme); secondly the number of partners is another aspect which usually corresponds to the geographical coverage and which has a clear impact on the financial capacity of the grouping; thirdly an interesting aspect is whether the partnership covers a contiguous territory or if it consists of transnational cooperation (which will result in marked differences between the stakeholders' attitudes and perceptions)
- the socio-economic situation at regional level, i.e. the actual situation and the perception of needs and challenges from the perspective of stakeholders: to some extent this determines development alternatives – the options will differ sharply between peripheral or mountainous regions as compared to highly integrated and densely populated conurbations; thus, in the end, the socio-economic situation also defines the capacity of individual partners to finance the grouping
- The EGTC's specific path of evolution is probably the most important aspect; examples range from shared interest starting at local level as a nucleus of development (e.g. the hospital, a border crossing in a split city), to the step-by-step development of a strategic interest grouping for urban policies.

About one third of all EGTCs are small local partnerships consisting of 2 to 20 municipalities. Another third of EGTCs can be seen as regional partnerships involving 2 to 6 partners. For such partnerships in the framework of ETC, there is an inherent drive from shared strategy development towards regional development measures which focus on tangible issues such as cultural and natural heritage, tourism development and infrastructure development (with a focus on transport).

As already stated, the socio-economic situation in the region covered by the EGTC predefines to some extent the main goals and the overarching strategy in strategy and project development. For about two thirds of the groupings – in particular those in the Spanish-French-Portuguese and the Hungarian-Slovak-Romanian areas – a broad approach to cohesion policies and regional development, i.e. social and economic policy, is the guiding element. Project ideas and projects focus on infrastructure development, entrepreneurship, tourism development paired with nature conservation or deriving value from natural heritage. For EGTCs where the partnership consists of a majority of rural municipalities, the problems of emigration and unemployment are clear concerns for local stakeholders. The latter fact is also mirrored in the focus on activities linked to education and training for young people.

The group of EGTCs located in the core areas of the EU – i.e. the territories of France, Belgium, Germany and Luxembourg – reveal a focus on spatial planning and urban development as the strategic anchor of the work paired with initiatives in the fields of culture, sports and education aimed at raising awareness and visibility.

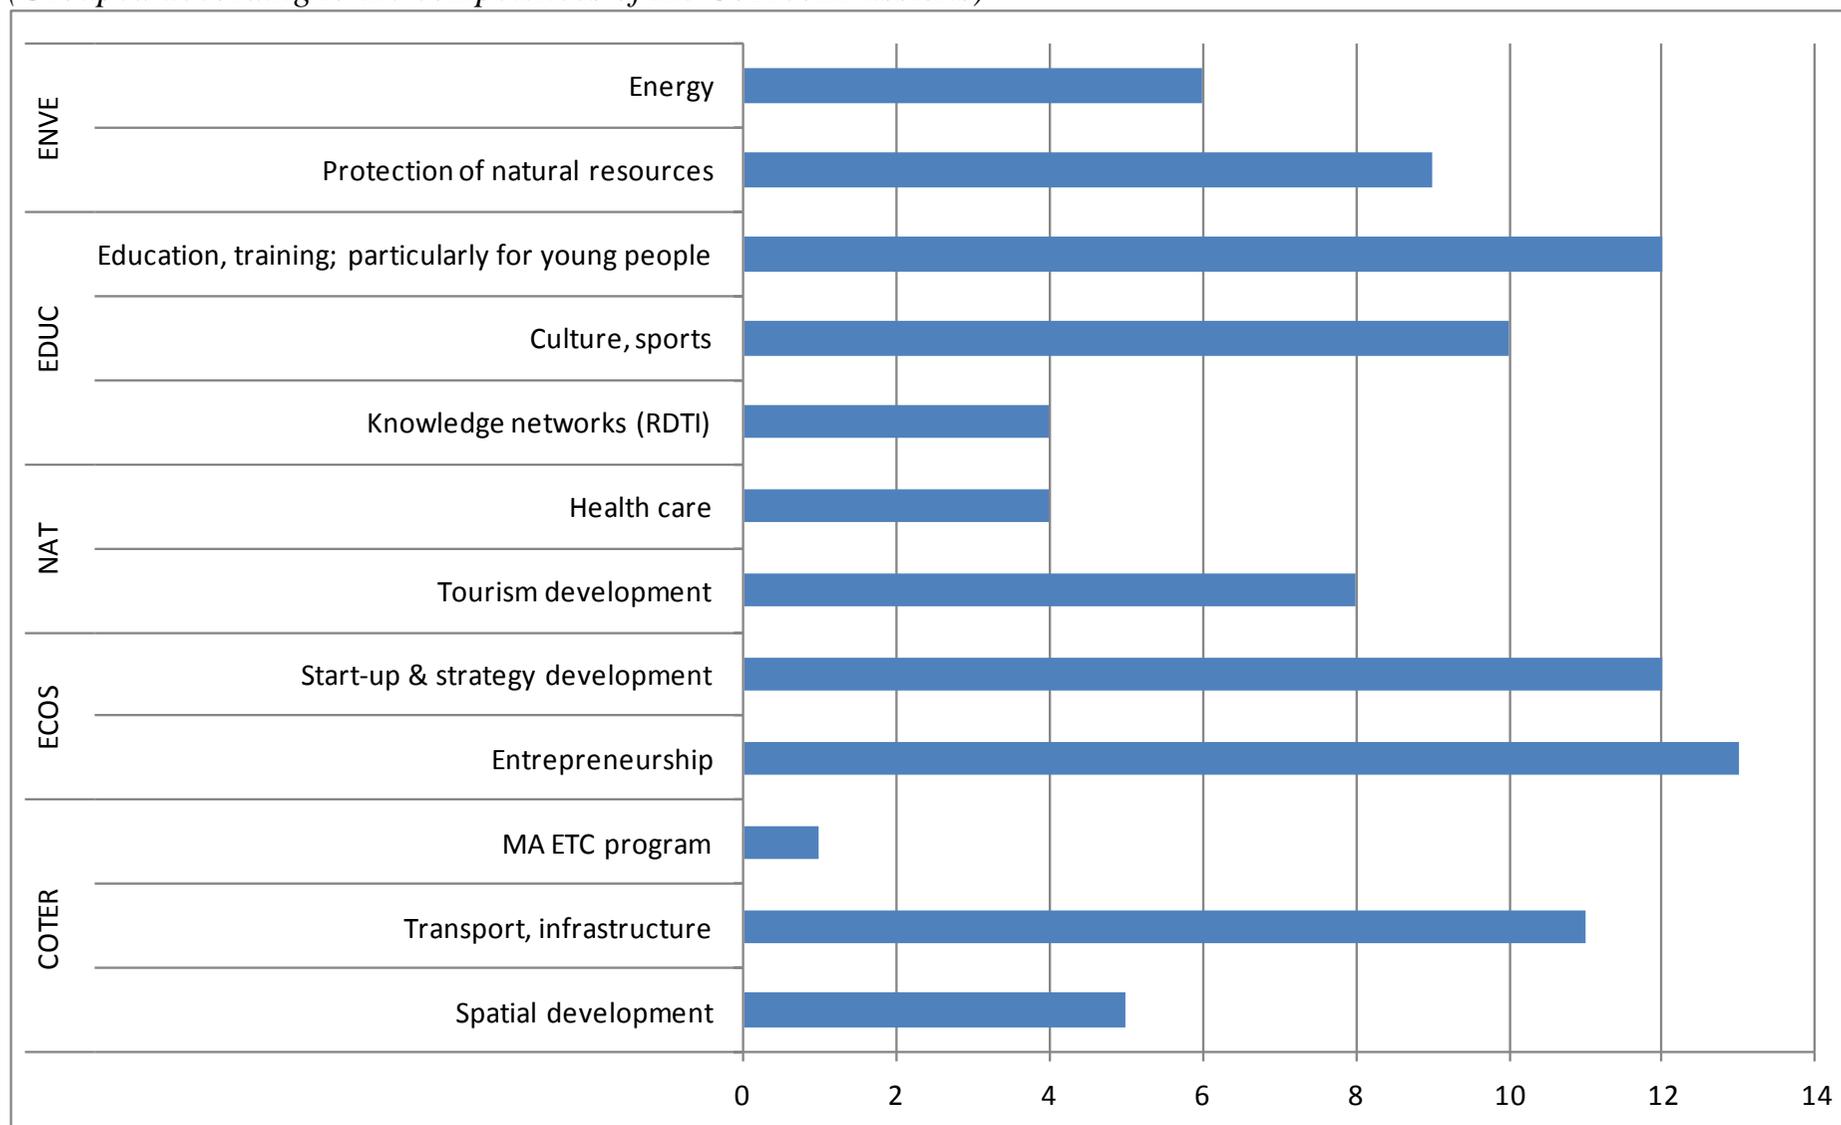

Three EGTCs have been founded for quite specific ends: the EGTC Grande Region acts as MA for a multi-lateral cross-border cooperation programme under ETC; the EGTC Hospital Cerdanya was established to manage a cross-border hospital in a mountainous region; the recently founded EUKN is an interest grouping to promote urban policies.

The chart below provides an aggregate picture of the policy areas currently covered by the groupings. It is important to note that this represents a snapshot and it is based on:

- the main lines of strategy according to the documents and
- information on projects which either have been implemented or are currently being implemented

In addition, it has to be stressed that most EGTCs are considered to be instruments for cooperation in order to develop and implement projects: over the coming years their focus of action will be subject to change.

(Grouped according to the competences of the CoR commissions)

It should be noted that the overwhelming majority of EGTCs address several topics, be it in the founding documents or in the projects implemented. The grid in Annex 1 analyses the EGTCs in greater detail.

The EGTCs and the Europe 2020 strategy

EGTCs are vehicles for cooperation: a number of EGTCs clearly state that their primary role is to implement cooperative projects. These institutions offer a platform to discuss and develop ideas and the subsequent expertise to implement projects. With a few exceptions, EGTCs are not driven by one operational target but rather by the need to encourage interest in a variety of development issues. Specialisation in certain thematic fields might be a step to come in the future, but it is not yet a visible and viable strategy for the majority of groupings. Mainstream programmes in cohesion policy are expected to deliver clear-cut contributions to the Europe 2020 strategy. The role of ETC will be more indirect, although the effects must not be underestimated. A number of EGTCs cover regions which are at risk of economic marginalisation: for such regions, EGTCs are a vital link to European policies.

Europe 2020 covers a wide range of policy areas. In almost all of these areas, territorial cooperation represents an important area of potential. However, this potential can only currently be assessed in a tentative manner. A brief appraisal along the seven flagship initiatives might help to understand this perspective.

Table 9. Appraisal of EGTC contribution to the Flagship Initiatives (Europe 2020)

Flagship initiative	Appraisal and prospects
Digital Agenda	Might become an interesting issue in particular for those EGTCs that mostly comprise rural areas; currently only one specific project
Innovation Union	The EGTCs situated in the cross-border conurbations in the ‘heartland’ of the EU have or will have a focus on cooperation in RTDI (since this will also be a concentration of the next generation of ETC programmes in these regions)
Youth on the Move	Several EGTCs have become active in this field – it is needs-driven due to high youth unemployment and emigration in the territories of many groupings; actions in this field are of considerable interest to policy makers
Resource-efficient Europe	This is already a focus in a limited number of EGTCs (mostly the aspect of renewable energy production); since it will be a focus of the new generation of ETC-programmes it will be of interest
Industrial Policy for the Globalisation Era	Given the composition of the partnerships and in the extent of their policy delivery, significant contributions of EGTCs to this initiative cannot be expected.

An agenda for new skills and jobs	The basic rationale is similar to the one presented for Youth on the Move – this will become an interesting topic
European Platform against Poverty	From the current perspective it seems more likely that this will remain a core issue for national policies supported by ESF programmes.

Currently, EGTCs mainly contribute to the flagship initiative Youth on the Move. In fact, a significant number of EGTCs are active in the field of youth education.

4 EGTC in the process of being set up

This section describes the EGTCs that are currently being set up. It should be noted, however, that the list of EGTCs in preparation might not be complete given that for some EGTCs it has not been possible to find out how advanced the concept is; how solid their projects are or how far along they are in the consolidation process.

Therefore, the following section will focus solely on EGTCs that are known to the Committee of the Regions (CoR) and that are therefore in the list of EGTCs being set up on the CoR website.

According to that list, 17 EGTCs are currently in the pipeline, four of which already have a legal personality. The information used for the analysis of these 17 EGTCs has only been gathered through desk research. This means that although the information is of good quality, it may not be complete or fully up-to-date since it has not been discussed with the respective authorities in an interview. In addition, it must be stressed that once set up these EGTCs may slightly change, especially when it comes to membership and official seat. This is particularly evident for groupings that include parties from countries which are not EU Member States yet and which, according to the current EGTC regulation, will not be allowed to become official members of an EGTC.

However, initial hypotheses can be drawn about the future EGTCs:

First, the presence of the EGTC will grow stronger in those countries which currently have a low number of EGTCs constituted (above all: Sweden, Austria, Poland, and the Czech Republic). In other words, constituted EGTCs will be more spread-out across Europe, bringing the benefits of such entities to an increasing number of EU citizens.

Second, some of the partnerships wanting to become EGTCs do not include any EU Member States (e.g. Ukraine, Switzerland, Albania, and Macedonia). This means that, now more than ever, it will be important to address these topics in the regulation and to specify the potential role of these non-EU Member States in the EGTCs.

Third, together with the more traditional EGTCs created from previous Euroregions or within previous INTERREG Initiatives, this latest analysis also revealed the idea of planning EGTCs along the Trans-European axis (e.g. EGTC CETC or EGTC CODE 24). This is of particular importance from a European perspective, considering the increased role that the Trans-European Networks – Transport (TEN-T) – will have in future.

Finally, another interesting project is the EGTC ‘Cities of Ceramics’, which is the first grouping that will be made up exclusively of associations of local authorities.

Table 7 gives an overview of the key information and the status of development of the EGTCs. Map 5 shows the geographical distribution of EGTCs in the pipeline. The next section of this chapter provides some information about the EGTCs in preparation that we were able to gather through desk research.

5 Synthesis and findings

There have been notable developments in the establishment of EGTCs since the last Monitoring Report was published last year. At the time of finalising the present report, 32 new EGTCs have been set up while 17 are in the pipeline. In this report, the main developments of 2012 are therefore presented in four different sections.

Territorial coverage

As was the case in the EGTC Monitoring Report 2011, Hungary led in the creation of new EGTCs in 2012. Indeed, out of the six newly constituted EGTCs, five have at least one Hungarian partner and four are at least located on the Hungarian border. More specifically, two EGTC are located along the Hungarian-Slovak border, one is located on the Hungarian-Romanian border and yet another one on the Hungarian-Slovenian border.

An interesting case is the EUKN EGTC. Its members do not share any geographical borders, but instead they cooperate on urban development projects. The idea of the EUKN EGTC is to establish a platform for exchanging practices and knowledge on urban policy rather than implementing projects or programmes along geographical borders.

Another interesting case is the EGTC Novohrad Nógrád, whose aim is to carry out activities that are strongly interlinked with a Geopark and a UNESCO site. Looking at the broad picture of the 32 EGTCs that have been established in total, it could be argued that:

Similarly to the conclusions of the last EGTC Monitoring Report, Hungary continues to lead the way among groupings in terms of participating in new EGTCs. In fact, 13 EGTCs – i.e. almost half of the newly established groupings – have at least one Hungarian member. Interestingly, nine of these are partnerships with Slovak members who, again, have only established partnerships with other Hungarian colleagues.

10 EGTCs have French members, 5 of which are groupings that include Spanish partners (8 in total).

It is also interesting that due to their strategic position “in the midst of borders”, small countries like Belgium and Cyprus have members in four groupings each. On the other hand, Germany is represented in only four groupings despite its geographical and population size.

These kinds of dynamics change when looking at the EGTCs in the pipeline. In fact, although four of them still include Hungarian partners, many others include countries that are not yet represented in the EGTC landscape. This includes Germany (five EGTCs in the pipeline), Italy (four EGTCs in the pipeline), Romania (four EGTCs in the pipeline) and Poland (four EGTCs in the pipeline).

It could be assumed that the reason for the low participation in, or creation of, EGTCs by Poland and Romania is that they are amongst the more recent countries to have joined the EU (2004 and 2007 respectively). For Germany and Italy, on the other hand, the reason could only be hypothesised. The reason in Germany could be the fragmented EGTC regulation (Germany has not yet adopted a national provision) while for Italy the reluctance may be linked to the lengthy bureaucratic and administrative procedures involved in setting up EGTCs.

However, drawing a broad picture with both the established EGTCs and the EGTCs in preparation, it could be argued that the geographical coverage of the EGTCs is almost complete. The Baltic States are the exception to the rule since they are not part of any established EGTCs nor any of those in the pipeline.

Reasons for establishment

The idea behind forming an EGTC has changed slightly over time.

Initially, the main reason for establishing EGTCs was to build an institutional framework with geographical neighbours to work on projects of common interest and overcome national barriers. The following types of EGTCs were envisaged:

- traditional “development” projects (e.g. INTERREG);
- platforms to jointly manage a structure of public interest (e.g. the Hospital of Cerdanya);
- instruments to protect common natural and cultural heritage (e.g. Novohrad-Nógrád Geopark).

In addition, this report identified three other reasons for establishing an EGTC: First, as already mentioned, an EGTC can be a platform to enhance the exchange of knowledge and expertise on urban development practices throughout Europe. The only case so far is the EUKN EGTC, which includes national authorities from nine different Member States.

Second, an EGTC can act as a structure to support the polycentric development of the territories of the members independently of geographical borders. This is the case for the EGTC Tritia, which is currently awaiting official approval.

Third, an EGTC can be planned along a Tran-European Axis (TEN-T) as a managerial structure to support the development of a European corridor. This is the case for the EGTC CETC and the EGTC CODE 24, which are currently in preparation.

Challenges and issues

Both setting up and running the EGTCs that were created in 2012 were challenges in themselves.

With regard to the establishment of the EGTCs, the main challenge consisted in registering the EGTC with the responsible authorities. The process of approving the necessary documentation was lengthy and never straightforward. In the case of the EGTC EUKN, this process took almost two years.

Once the EGTCs were registered, several other challenges arose:

First, almost all established EGTCs encountered procedural problems when hiring staff. The main difficulty in this respect was overcoming the local bureaucratic obstacles to hiring staff from the EGTC's members to work in the structure. It seems that the national institutional frameworks are not yet ready to accommodate a fully European body like the EGTC.

Second, one EGTC has encountered problems with regard to the VAT system. Under national law, the EGTC was not recognised as a non-market-oriented organisation

Aspects of multilevel governance

The case studies have shown that EGTCs are generally established to bring together authorities from different administrative levels, including regions, communities or municipalities to act together as one. Through the creation of this legal framework, partners from different countries and different administrative levels can have one common voice in regional, national or international settings and take joint decisions.

The EGTCs established in 2012 have expressed a wish for access to stable sources of funding (European programme financing), especially in the first months of their being set up. Financial support is essential for guaranteeing the operational stability of a grouping. This goes together with EGTCs' desire to be able to apply directly for EU funding as partners.
